Background of the OPG Commission

Pursuant to § 13-94-104.1(1)(a)I and II, C.R.S. (2023), the Colorado General Assembly created the Office of Public Guardianship Board of Directors and Office within the Judicial Department. The Board is comprised of 7 members. Three members are appointed by the Chief Justice, all of which must be attorneys licensed to practice law in the state of Colorado. Each of these members must reside in a different congressional district, and no more than two members appointed by the Chief Justice may be from the same political party. Four non-attorney members are appointed by the Governor, three of which must have lived experience with a family member who is an at-risk adult or who have expertise and experience in advocating for the at-risk adult population, including advocacy and representation in the areas of aging, mental health, substance use disorders, homelessness, veterans issues, intellectual and developmental disabilities, healthcare, and law enforcement and criminal justice. At least one of those three members must be a person with lived experience with a family member who is an at-risk adult. The fourth non-attorney member must be an individual who has not served directly in an advocacy role for at-risk adults. Each of the members appointed by the Governor must reside in a different congressional district, and no more than three members appointed by the Governor may be from the same political party.

Pursuant to HB 19-1045, signed into law on May 30, 2019 and which shall take effect on July 1, 2019, the Commission is charged with appointing the Director for the Office of Public Guardianship. The Commission appointed Sophia M. Alvarez to be the Office's first Director. Ms. Alvarez assumed her duties on October 21, 2019. Ms. Alvarez serves at the pleasure of the Commission pursuant to § 13-94-104.1(3), C.R.S. (2023).
